ABOUT THE BOOK

Chief Alan Cowen walks us through the early history of the City of Los Angeles emergency services, from horse-drawn fire fighting equipment and ambulances carriages up through today's modern department that has become a model for the entire country.

As a young boy Alan was obsessed with fire engines and ambulances with sirens a blazing. After witnessing a crash at age ten, transformed from hysteria and chaos to professionalism by the EMS team, he knew he wanted a career in Emergency Medical Services.

Chief Cowen takes us into the command centers and on the scene to some of the City's largest emergency events including vehicle accidents, earthquakes and riots. This book represents a time capsule that historians and citizens alike will enjoy.
